Subject:	Computershare Corporate Trust commits $600,000 to pay off the student loans of the company's high-performing employees

NEW YORK and COLUMBIA, MARYLAND, May 3, 2022 – Computershare Corporate Trust has committed $600,000 to pay off the student loans of the company's high-performing employees, including new hires.

Under this new program, a Computershare Corporate Trust employee or new hire can apply for a maximum of $60,000 student loan payment from the company. The average US student loan debt is $28,950<sup>1</sup>.

Eligible applicants must be full-time employees of Computershare Corporate Trust for a year, provide proof of current student loan and earn less than $150,000. New hires must begin their employment before July 1, 2022.

"Many Americans leave college with significant debt from student loans, and we are pleased to help some of our employees say goodbye to part or all of their student loan debts," said Michael Watchke, US Head of Computershare Corporate Trust.

"We believe that this is one more enticement for job seekers that might consider a career with us in one of our many offices, including in Columbia, Maryland, the city of Minneapolis, or as an employee working remotely.

"Job candidates will find many benefits to working at Computershare, including a flexible working environment, an inclusive and supportive culture and a socially-minded company with an ambitious plan to reduce its carbon footprint."

In September 2023, recipients will be announced after the selection committee reviews and selects those successful, based on their achievements according to Computershare's 'Purple Values', which define its culture worldwide.

Computershare acquired Wells Fargo's US Corporate Trust business in 2021, which was rebranded Computershare Corporate Trust, with offices around the US.
