Subject:	Computershare donates iPads to local schools to help homelearning during pandemic

Bristol, – Computershare has given 33 new iPads to help pupils access online lesson material during the pandemic after spotting a request on social media for IT equipment.

The global financial services company employs around 1,500 people at its office in South Bristol, and pupils at nearby Bedminster Down, Headley Park, Cheddar Grove Primary and Wansdyke Primary Schools will benefit from its donation.

Tim Kent, Councillor for Hengrove and Whitchurch Park, who made the appeal for equipment, said: "This generous donation from Computershare will help ensure that pupils can keep up with their schoolwork at home during the pandemic."

Richard Eddy, Councillor for Bishopsworth, said: "These devices will make an enormous difference to pupils' ability to learn from home while restrictions on attending school remain."

Ben Wills, Assistant Principal at Bedminster Down School, said: "These devices will help us ensure that our pupils are not denied access to learning as a result of limited access to technology."

"Computershare's donation will enable our students to complete their schoolwork more easily, take part in interactive lessons and activities as well as remain confident they can keep pace with their friends and peers during lessons."

Lucy Newcombe, Global Head of People and Corporate Communications at Computershare, said: "South Bristol has acted as a great home for Computershare for many years now, and we are always keen to support our local community."

"The pandemic has created a great many challenges, including for schools, parents and pupils, and we hope that this donation will make a difference to the lives of school pupils in the area."
