Subject:	Computershare donate clothing to support disadvantaged women as part of global drive

Dublin, Tuesday 29 May 2018 – Computershare employees in Dublin have donated 30 items of professional clothing to the local branch of Dress for Success in a recent donation drive.

Dress for Success is an international not-for-profit organisation that provides professional attire, interview coaching and ongoing support to help disadvantaged women enter the workplace, and Computershare Dublin's contribution formed part of a global drive by the company that saw a total of over 3,000 items donated to local branches.

Trevor Watkins, Managing Director at Computershare in Dublin, said: "We've had a fantastic response from employees in response to our latest donation drive and I've been extremely impressed by my colleagues' generosity for such a good cause.

"We see diversity as a source of strength, and through the work of our global diversity and inclusion network we're committed to ensuring everyone at Computershare is given an equal opportunity to succeed.

"Our team in Dublin has been supporting Dress for Success since 2015 and since then we've expanded our donation efforts to many of our offices around the world, collecting thousands of donations."

Angela Smith, CEO of Dress for Success Dublin said "We're incredibly grateful to all of Computershare's employees for their enthusiastic support over the past three years and have been so impressed by how their annual campaign has grown internationally from their Dublin office.

"The donations we receive are an invaluable resource and help us to support the economic independence of women, providing a real confidence boost and helping to secure jobs."

The financial services company has organised donation drives at many of its offices globally during the past two years, collecting over 6,000 items in total.
